Snag to delay stadium opening

The story of the rehab of the fields and track at the Frank Fitzgerald Athletic Complex is one of good news and bad news. The good news is the field at Ken Strong Stadium will be laid and in playable condition by Sept. 14, the night the Westies have their home opener vs. Jonathan Law of Milford.

The bad news, however, is the Elliott Marnell Track rehab won't be ready, and insurance and legal considerations have pushed the opening of the complex for games back to October.

The field is not the problem, officials said. The track being an unanticipated hazard is.

"The field will be ready," said Building Committee Chairman Ken Carney this week. "The fact the track is ripped up means there is a risk factor we are not willing to take."

Carney said the idea of a bridge over the track was considered to make the stadium grandstand accessible, but that was nixed when other factors came into consideration. Should someone get hurt on the track bed, which is now ground down to its base, the school system could be liable. That was something that played heavily in the decision.

According to Carney, the original idea was for the track to be done after the season, during the winter and into the early spring before the start of the spring season, when the track would be needed. However, other things came into play, including costs.

"Field Turf said there might be price increases or other costs involved if we waited. We're trying to keep the costs to the agreed price, and so we determined it was better to get the entire project done all at once," he said.

Since the decision was made, Co-Athletic Directors Joe Mor-

Dems avoid primary; Mullins opts write-in

The race for mayor was whittled down in both parties, with one averting a Sept. 12 primary, while the other saw one candidate drop out, opting instead for write-in status in November.

Democrat Dorinda Borer averted a primary last week when it was announced challenger Victor Borrás, the current Eighth District Councilman, failed to meet the required number of valid signatures to put himself on the ballot next month. State law requires 5% of the number of voters based on the last election.

Democratic Party Town Chairman Michael Last said Borrás' time was not right, and the party has to rally around its endorsed candidate.

"The West Haven Democratic party is united and behind Dorinda Borer and a very talented and strong slate of candidates. Everyone has the right to run for office, but this was not the right time for Mr. Borrás," Last stated in a press release. "The inability to obtain support for his effort is an indication that the Democrats across the city want unity and they want unity behind our endorsed candidate as she has the experience and leadership skills necessary to capitalize on the tremendous potential in West Haven. It has been decades since the Democratic Party was together and it feels good. I will reach out to Victor soon to invite him to join our growing team."

The three-way Republican primary was cut down to two this week, as candidate Steven R. Mullins pulled his name from consideration in the primary, but he's not out of the race.

In a statement this week, Mullins said he was opting to put his name in as a write-in candidate in November, hoping to garner the support of voters who see his vision for the city. The announcement came as a shock as Mullins had more than enough valid signatures to qualify for the primary.

"I have pulled my name out of the Sept. 12 Republican Mayoral Primary. I would like to take this opportunity to thank the hundreds of registered Republicans in West Haven that signed my primary petition. We exceeded the number required," the statement read.

He said the decision was based on principle.

"However, as I consider the path forward in my quest to lead West Haven to a brighter future, I have made a thoughtful decision. I have chosen not to run for Mayor on the Republican party line. This decision was not made lightly but is rooted in my vision for a more inclusive and successful West Haven," read the statement.

He stated the money used toward a primary would be better spent in a dedicated campaign in November.

"With two Republican opponents, self-funded with unlimited financial resources, I find it difficult to spending my citizen donated campaign funds fighting fellow Republicans, when I can spend it fighting the financial mismanagement and corruption that we have seen in the 34 years of Democratic Party rule in West Haven," the state

Schools set to open for new term, Aug. 28

For city students, the anticipation and fun of summer vacation is fast becoming the reality that all good things must come to an end. After a 10-week hiatus, the 2023-2024 school year is about to begin, and will begin with a full schedule of classes.

West Haven Public Schools 2023-2024 school year will begin on Monday, Aug. 28, with a full day of classes for all students.

School officials noted this week that free breakfast and lunch is available to all students under the the National School Lunch Program and School Breakfast Program.

Bus service starts (see page 15) on the first day of school. The schedule printed in this issue may have some alterations by opening day, according to officials. Look on www.whschools.org or all the Winkle Bus representative (203) 937-4331 with any questions regarding bus routes. Guidelines for bus service based on School Board Policy #3541 (see policy on www.whschools.org).

Registration has been ongoing during the summer for new families, and will continue until and after the new year begins.

All students new to the West Haven School District should be formally registered at their incoming school. Parents and guardians are asked to call (203) 937-4300 for information as to school assignments by home address.

The district's residency policy requires that all students, without exception, produce bona fide proof that they live in West Haven. As

Dear Felicia

Well whatta ya know before we even had a chance to bask in the vacation season, it is fast waning away. In another 10 days from the time yew git this missive, the kiddies will be back to school, with classes starting right away. No half-days anymore, just get right to it. As is usual the number of "back to school" sales are on the telly and effen yew go by a shopping mall, that's all there is. The message: time to get back to normal after a summer break...there are those of us, though, who never seem to get one. Wonder why?

Here in the Asylum by the Sea, things are shaking out for the mayoral campaign. The prospective candidates showed their countenances at the Savin Rock Festival – shortened as it was by the rain. Then came the petitioning process, where candidates were supposed to git their signatures and were seen in front of grocery stores and other places where people congregate or mill to git them to sign on the dotted line.

Sammy Bluejay was perched in various places, and there was an interesting back-and-forth betwixt the candidates and the public for the most part. In the end it was all about the numbers of signatures. The results were interesting in some way, especially on the Democratic side. Ya see, Victor Borrás the Eighth District Councilman was looking to primary Dorinda Borer in September.

That was an uphill battle, and Borrás didn't git the required number of signatures to make it, so there will be no primary in the city's majority party. Sammy hoid there might be an attempt by Borrás to come in as a candidate with another party, but that seems a long shot. Still there is a lotta time left, and it might happen.

Over on the GOP side, it was perty certain the three-way primary everyone thought was gonna happen was certified. Both Barry Cohen and Steven R. Mullins got the required signatures to git on the ballot. Some on the under-ticket did not, Sammy was told. But then Mullins threw a monkey wrench into the works

He pulled outta the primary and decided 'twas better to go the write-in route. Now, write-ins don't have a great track record in town, though some have collected enough votes to make a difference in the race over the decades. But, Mullins indicated the fact that both Paige Weinstein and Cohen have bigger war chests than he does, means he has to allocate money for the general election, ergo the write-in route.

And, his sentiments were pretty much on track

Almost the day after the endorsement came out Paige Weinstein, the endorsed candidate, had billboards up. She seems to know that of the three candidates she is the one with the least name recognition. So, off she went trying to get her face and name out to the public.

Barry and Steve, meanwhile, as we've said before, are two people perty well known in town, and one jest lost the last mayoral campaign by a handful of votes in a vote that had more than its share of irregularities. Whilst Steve might not be in the primary, his name recognition is still out there as is Cohen's. So, we'll see.

Sammy was wondering effen some of the watering holes around town were running a pool on this fight – they seem to bet on most things. How this tallies out will be one thing of interest since it is now a grudge match 'twixt Weinstein and Cohen. T'other will be effen the party can rally around the eventual winner. The GOP doesn't have a great track record when it comes to setch matters.

Ya see, we have hoid that at least one candidate might determine to run a campaign for mayor anyway on a minor party line. Effen that happens, the only person who will suffer will be the primary winner. He or she will be fishing out of the same pond for votes and split the total. That means that Dorinda Borer, who has to be considered the odds-on favorite in this race right now will waltz into the thoid floor of the Actors Colony.

Nelly Nuthatch was around and she was sayin' that after assuring everyone the new fields at the Frank Fitzgerald Sports Complex – particularly Ken Strong Stadium – was gonna be ready for the Sept 14 home opener, it seems that might not be the case. We hear-tell games are being moved out of the complex, and some local venues are being scoped out for use until the fields are put down.

The reason, I guess, was that the plan to put in things after the final whistle of the season before the holdidays and into next year hit a snag in the form of a possible price hike over and above, the agreed price. One could understand the decision in these hard times.

So, Nelly hears the field will be ready some time in October instead of September, meaning any home games will be switched to other locales. But the work involved is something, we're told.

We shall see, but it makes you wonder how something that was assured jest a few weeks back, could be so up in the air now? 'Tis a question.

On a more serious note, the parade of incompetence seems to continue in City Hall without end. For the second year in a row Moody's has not been able to get all the information it needs to assess our fair city's financial structure, and has put us on "review." Like I said this is the second year in a row, and one would think that with it coming up again this year, things would be a bit more, I dunno, ready?

Not here in the Asylum by the Sea and not in the Actors Colony. It seems getting information to organizations, committees and rating companies is a task not suited to the suits in City Hall. Lack of information got us audited by the feds, state officials looked for information in the MARB and elsewhere, the list goes on and on.

The excuses are always the same and can be listed by rote it's happened so much. Sooo, here we are, embarrassed, again, by our fearless leaders, who can't seem to meet a deadline. Remember charter revision? It was supposed to get rid of some of the "baked in" incompetence in City Hall. It got shot down by the politicians. And here we are years later, and the story is always the same.

Iva Lootey was perched around

Morse Avenue last week to peek at the progress made on Beach Street. As we reported last time the roadway was dug up and the crews over there seem to be putting in the new grades. Whilst all that is going on, the condominium complex is continuing with two of the four buildings looking complete. The rest are jest getting started it seems.

The restaurant that is supposed to go on the rest of the property is held up until the new grading is put in. Remember, the idea is to put the road up high enough it doesn't get flooding during major storms. Until that is done, the develpers can't git their restaurant started.

Iva was of the opinion things are running according to schedule, but who knows, things can change as we mentioned above. Let's hope not in this case.

Madame Olga came to tea t'other afternoon and she, being an Allingtown gal, was wondering when the final piece of the Allingtown puzzle was going to be announced. With the building of the two sides of the Post Road with new constructions and new businesses, she was wondering what was going on with the lot that had been the site of the Forest Theater.

Cobina had to admit she ain't heard much about that. The area was a staging facility for the new constructions over the last little while, but with all that done and gone, nothin' has been said about that lot. Effen that was completed, the overhaul of the Allingtown Center from what it was to what it is will be complete, and one would have to admit the before and after pictures would be stunning.

We'll poke the bushes to see effen anything might be planned over there. But what we're really interested in is the progress – or lack of it – for a new Allingtown library branch. There are spurts of info, the last being a shared building between the library and Fire Department, but we ain't hoid much since last winter.

So much to find out...

I guess the final thing Cobina was wondering was the status of the old Forest Theater site. Nw that Allingtown is perty attractive with its new construction all over the place, one wonders effen anything is planned for the site of the old movie house?

It's been used as a staging area for the other construction sites, but now that is over. So, one would hope the developers over there will see something useful for that tract, no?

With that bit o' chatter, I'll close mitt luff und kizzez, ment read. "In my heart, I believe that West Haven deserves leadership that reflects the entirety of our community. Leadership that listens to and understands the concerns of every citizen, regardless of their background. My commitment to this vision is unwavering. That is why I am asking Westies to support in a different way."

He encouraged all residents who supported his vision to write in his name on Nov. 7.

"Together, we can transcend political divisions and create a West Haven that embraces progress, equality, and opportunity for all. Let us set an example for the entire nation, showing that real change begins at the grassroots level.

Our city's potential is limitless, and by working together, we can ensure that every resident has the chance to thrive and succeed," statement read finally.

Republican endorsed candidate Paige Weinstein thanked Mullins for his service, but said the task is to rally behind her to give the city a new start.

"I want to recognize Mr. Mullins' many years of service to West Haven and wish him luck in his future endeavors," she said in a statement Monday. "On Sept. 12, Republicans must choose a candidate who will unite the party and lead the GOP team to victory in November. As the only candidate with no ties to City Hall, I will provide a deserved fresh start after decades of mismanagement. Then, on Nov. 7, Westies will have a choice between candidates with connections to past corrupt administrations, or they can turn to Paige," the statement read.

Barry Lee Cohen, who qualified for the primary with an excess number of signatures was philosophical, but said the move to a write-in campaign was not a good idea for the party.

"Each campaign makes its own decisions based on many factors, including its ability to win a race. Steve's exit from the race to be a write-in candidate is not helpful in fixing the mess the Democrats created and has lingered for decades," Cohen said in a statement. "When fellow Republicans actively work to split the general election vote, should it be through a write-in or by forming a new party, it makes our ability to win in November more challenging in a city where Democrats outnumber Republicans 4.5 to 1."

Cohen reminded voters of his near success two years ago. Cohen lost by less than 35 votes in an election that saw more than its share of irregularities, especially concerning the handling and custody of absentee ballots.

A subsequent court case and appeal found there was not enough evidence to support his claim the election results would have been different because of the difficulties in the case.

"We saw just two years ago in what was one of the closest races in the entire state when I came within less than a few dozen votes of providing accountability, fiscal responsibility and transparency back to City Hall," he stated.

Rehab: Complex plan has timetable reset

rell and Mike Anquillare have scrambled to adjust home and away dates, find new fields for home games, and make timing and other logistical arrangements.

West Haven's first few home games in football were moved to Veterans Field on Bull Hill Lane, where Notre Dame also plays its home games. It is also the home of the West Haven Seahawks of the Ray Tellier Midget Football League. That may have been the easiest fix.

Football sub-varsity games had to be moved and girls' and boys' soccer games are being moved to other fields or home games are being swapped. Football sub-varsity games, normally played at the home of the opponent if the varsity game is played at a school's field, have been moved to the opponent's venue.

Soccer games are a different story. Morrell and Anquillare are scheduling games to fields in town, and juggling schedules if there are two games scheduled for a single date. It's not been easy.

"We will do what we have to do," said Morrell. "It's all part of the job."

Besides venue changes, there are notifications that must be made to officiating groups as well as police, fire and EMT services.

The decision to rehabilitate the complex, originally opened in 1989, came when American Rescue Plan Act funds were earmarked for the project, which had been originally planned as a bond issue. The turf replacement will be the fourth such field on the site, which must be replaced about every decade.

Carney noted the field was 12 years old, and in need of replacement, while the track had been virtually untouched for a longer period, with only cosmetic changes. Two lanes are unusable.

In the process of determining to fix the track, the decision was made to convert the Frank Biondi Softball Field to an artificial surface as well.

Originally planned for the winter into early next year, this has been moved up so the entire complex will be done in the current year.

Biondi, which was built on a tract between the Whitey Piurek Baseball Field and Ken Strong Stadium, is subject to drainage problems.

The new surface and drainage work will make the field playable after heavy rains, drying in a short period of time. The field is not only home to the West Haven Blue Devils softball team but has been a favored spot by the Southern Connecticut Conference for its league playoffs, as well as a venue for the Connecticut Interscholastic Athletic Conference's softball tournament.

The entire project is tagged at a cost of $2,560,650, with $1,609,500 marked for the football field carpet and track, and $919,000 for the softball field.

Though fans might be disappointed at the inability to use the Fitzgerald Complex for part of the fall season, Carney believes once the project is completed, the fans will be happy with the result.

Back to School 2023

Just as it seems to happen each year, the summer – at least the school vacation part of it – is winding down, and the new term is ready to begin. If there are a few sad faces around your home in these last weeks of August, at least part of it may have to do with the opening of schools.

It is no secret that much of what we do as a society, the way we schedule our lives, businesses, and social calendars, has much to do with the academic year.

Social and fraternal organizations base their business years on the academic calendar as do many other parts of society.

For those of school or college age, that means the return to the schedule and structure of the scholastic year. And for those beginning the new term, we wish them a happy and challenging year, full of learning and the fun that goes with friends and activities.

For those of us in the work-a-day world, there is a certain nostalgia for school and our experiences, where life seemed a bit simpler, and responsibilities not as taxing. But we realize that with the beginning of school comes the end of the vacation season and beginning of a more ordered schedule.

So, for those getting back into the swing of the school year, good luck and do well! For those off to college or grad school, best wishes for fulfilling your dreams of a degree.

While the fun and sun of summer might be coming to an end – as all good things must – getting back into the rigor of a schedule is an education unto itself and should be appreciated for the good habits it will afford you in your future lives.

Drivers be alert!

Meanwhile, the new school year serves as a reminder to motorists they must be more aware of school children, school buses, and following the rules of the road. It is no secret more and more motorists are treating stop signs, stop lights, and rights of way not as laws, but as suggestions.

We are alarmed at the growing number of drivers who seem to believe that red lights are for everyone else, and not them.

Running a red light used to be a mistake or a rarity. It is becoming more common and more dangerous, with drivers playing chicken with crossing traffic just to get beyond the light.

Stop signs, too, are ignored in greater numbers. We are aware daily of drivers not even coming to rolling stops, but barreling through stop signs as if they are exempt from the rules of the road.

This laxity of compliance has led to people ignoring school bus signals. Last year, in our travels we noted an uptick of people passing school buses with flashing red lights.

This can be a dangerous decision that can be life-changing for the driver, and life-ending for a child.

We see this wave of ignoring traffic laws as a symptom of our eroding social mores. Our society is becoming more and more lawless, and that lawlessness is siphoning its way down to traffic laws.

We urge motorists to be on guard at the beginning of the school year, and to redouble a personal effort to comply with traffic laws that are a means of keeping us all safe.

One wrong decision because of arrogance or negligence can have life-altering consequences. Be alert more now than before now that schools are starting.

Trump and 'The fear factor'

By Rich Lowry
Syndicated Columnist
The fear factor

Donald Trump has gotten indicted yet again, and, as usual, most of the other Republican candidates have been sympathetic, if not outright deferential, to him.

It's another episode that raises the question: Can someone who is afraid of Trump defeat him?

Of all the advantages that Trump has in the competition for the 2024 Republican nomination -- immediate past president, ability to generate enormous media attention, etc. -- perhaps foremost among them is the fact that the other Republican candidates are afraid.

It's hard to think of anyone who has ever won a major-party nomination while showing fear, especially of someone else in the field.

A successful candidate might be careful around certain issues or constituencies, or back off of an unpopular position. But being clearly scared by an opponent is something else, entirely. George W. Bush and John McCain might have hated or disdained each other in 2000, same with McCain and Mitt Romney in 2008, or Romney and Newt Gingrich in 2012. But no one was ever clearly, demonstrably afraid.

Until now.

When asked about Trump, most of the candidates might not actually lick their lips, or swallow hard or begin to blink faster, but you wouldn't be surprised if they did. Generally, they'll evade questions, reject the premise or revert to an answer that has been as carefully crafted as an official statement by one of the parties negotiating the Paris Peace Accords.

You can almost see them thinking:

Maybe he'll leave me alone.

Maybe he'll make me his veep.

Maybe there will be a better time to attack him later.

If they can help it, his opponents will never say Trump's name -- he's the most unnamed major politician in American history. Mike Pence has tended to call him "my former running mate."

This means that Donald Trump's political dominance of the rest of the field extends to a kind of personal and psychological dominance.

A key aspect of the Trump phenomenon from the beginning has been how he's brought the subrational element of politics that's always been there, but usually relatively submerged, to the fore -- more Frans de Waal, author of "Chimpanzee Politics," than Richard Hofstadter; more Dana White than Lee Atwater.

This raises the possibility that not taking Trump head-on means more than simply missing the opportunity to make the case against him. It also means implicitly acknowledging his status as the Big Man of Republican politics, and the rival's status as a subordinate player in the world Trump created and rules.

The only one who's really not playing this game is Chris Christie, who gives as good as he gets and also needles Trump and initiates fights against him. If Christie can achieve a breakout in New Hampshire, it will be based, in part, on winning points on strength and courage while doing and saying what no one else dares. (Also-rans Will Hurd and Asa Hutchinson criticize Trump, too, but more politely and conventionally.)

All that said, the other candidates are reacting to a genuine conundrum -- Republican voters might be open to an alternative to Trump in theory, but they don't want anyone to criticize him. How to square that circle is the biggest challenge for the rest of the field, at least those members of it genuinely running to win.

To be fair, Governor Ron DeSantis, as Trump's main tar

Teens and phones, know the dangers!

It's no secret that our teens are addicted to their smartphones. According to a Common Sense Media survey, they rack up more than seven hours of daily screen time. Most teenagers would rather be texting or scrolling their social media feeds instead of spending time in the "real" world. Student wellbeing activist David Magee says parents have every right to be concerned by this alarming trend

"Smartphones have changed children's lives forever, but not necessarily for the better," says Magee, author of the upcoming book Things Have Changed: What Every Parent (and Educator) Should Know About the Student Mental Health and Substance Misuse Crisis (Matt Holt, August 2023, ISBN: 978-1-6377439-6-6, $22.00) and founder of the William Magee Institute for Student Wellbeing and the William Magee Center for AOD and Wellness Education at the University of Mississippi. "These devices are the gateway to your child's weak spots. Over time they steal their joy and set them up for problems they aren't equipped to handle."

Smartphones rob children, teens, and young adults of the connection they really crave and create habits and behaviors that will lead to challenges down the road, says Magee. They also keep children up late, stunt their social development, and open the doorway to excessive social media use—which comes with its own set of negative consequences.

Here's a closer look at how smartphones are putting your children at risk.

Smartphones fuel rising levels of stress, anxiety, and depression in teens. Young people prefer to stay connected to their phones to avoid missing out on texts and social media posts from their friends. But at the same time, excessive smartphone use erodes their mental health in various ways. Constantly checking a phone for updates creates stress and anxiety.

They rob children of vital sleep. Smartphone use disrupts sleep in many ways, yet children routinely sacrifice a good night's rest so they can scroll. One study showed that use of electronic screens before bedtime results in longer time to fall asleep and decreased evening sleepiness, reduced melatonin secretion, circadian clock delay, reduced amount and delay in rapid eye movement sleep, and reduced next-morning alertness.

"Lack of sleep creates a domino effect," says Magee. "Children and teens who don't sleep are more at risk for symptoms of ADHD, rollercoaster emotions and impulses, increased anxiety and depression, and angry outbursts. This can lead to use of prescription medications when in fact, what is needed is more routine quality sleep."

Smartphones stunt children's social skills. As

Viet Vets seek names for memorial addition

Current and former city residents who served in the Vietnam War are sought by the West Haven Vietnam Memorial Inc. Committee to have their names inscribed on a new section of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Bradley Point Park.

To qualify for name recognition on the memorial "wall," Vietnam veterans must apply and meet the following requirements:

- Applicants must live or have lived in West Haven. Veterans living in West Haven must provide proof of residence, such as a utility bill.

The committee does not have a formal application. Veterans must mail all documents, which are due Oct. 1, to West Haven Vietnam Veterans, City Hall, lower level, 355 Main St., West Haven 06516.

The Vietnam Veterans Memorial includes a black granite wall inscribed with the names of those from West Haven who served or gave their lives in Vietnam from 1959 to 1975, along with three white flagpoles draped with the American, Connecticut and prisoner-of-war flags.

The memorial, dedicated Nov. 12, 2003, also includes a black granite map of the four battle districts of Vietnam bearing the inscription "All Gave Some, Some Gave All," as well as five bronze insignia markers atop black granite posts representing each branch of the U.S. armed forces.

get, has been willing to push back as necessary, and he makes a constant, implicit critique of Trump's electoral prospects and governing abilities. But the Florida governor is always careful to stay on the right side of the line, biding his time for later or hoping that his message catches on without having to grasp the nettle.

This isn't unreasonable, but, again, it exposes a disparity -- he has a strategy, while Trump has a sledgehammer.

So long as everyone believes that Trump has one and they don't -- and acts accordingly -- the fear factor will continue to work in Trump's favor.

The Twilight League Part III

With thanks to Roland DePew and Mike Freda-

The Twilight League played at Painter Park until about 1990, sending fly balls into Kelsey

Avenue and the neighboring properties; finally, they moved to Allingtown, playing their games at Quigley Stadium, so named for local businessman Moe Quigley, who originally built the stadium. In the words of longtime player and former league officer (now North Haven First Selectman) Mike Freda:

"There was one significant development that triggered the complete move to Quigley

Stadium from Painter Park, and that was aluminum bats becoming more technologically enhanced and, as players were also naturally getting bigger, more balls were flying out of Painter at a record pace.

"Right field was only 265 feet down the line, and the right field bank stretching into right centerfield was relatively short in distance. Many of us right hand hitters were hitting homers to right field with wood bats in the late 1970's before the first phase of aluminum bats entered the league around 1979. Those aluminum bats paled in comparison to the more sophisticated aluminum bats in the 1990's.

"Also, it had become apparent that Quigley was the more «glamorous» venue with its major league dimensions and stadium seating style.

"More top players around the area were drawn to the league because of Quigley. It also was a better venue to host tournaments with leagues from all over Connecticut and New York, which contributed greatly to the league's revenue. As for me, I had become very comfortable in climbing up the embankments at Painter Park to chase long fly balls but I liked the room in the outfield to run down balls at Quigley Stadium with center field being 410 feet from home plate."

It is interesting to note that the Twilight League returned to the use of wooden bats in 2004.

Today, Twilight League players come from 36 towns, and represent Connecticut, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania and even Puerto Rico.

Dan Shine is a columnist for the West Haven Voice, and local history buff.

In addition, they represent forty colleges. The league operates with six teams who each play 25 games per season. They play from Monday to Saturday, beginning in Mid-May and playing until Mid-July.

Everything is very organized and competitive, and collegiate umpires call the games.

Among the players are veteran players, many of whom are active up into middle-age; in addition, there are a great many players in their teens and twenties. There is a special chemistry at work there: the veteran players offer guidance and the younger players work to improve their skills—in this way they feed off of each other.

For more details, see their website www.whtl.org

Mike Freda, a West Haven native and current First Selectman of North Haven, lays out for a catch during his playing days.

Letters, we get Letters

Ferraro endorses Paige Weinstein

Thank you for your continued support for me as your State Representative in the 117th House District! I am writing this letter as a full and enthusiastic endorsement of Paige Weinstein as the next Mayor of West Haven.

I have gotten to know Paige over the last 4 years, and found her to be a passionate, steadfast advocate for all things West Haven. Paige and her husband Andy have served West Haven and invested in our community by being proud owners of their Allingtown business for more than 40 years.

Her devotion to her family, being a wife, a mother of two, and a loving grandmother, as well as her success as an in-town businesswoman of four decades, qualifies Paige to be able to move our town forward. I have full confidence that Paige Weinstein will surround herself with a winning team that will know how to transform West Haven, guaranteeing a prosperous future.

As a lifelong resident, I have seen administration after administration continue to make the same mistakes repeatedly. Paige is a new face.

She is not beholden to any special interest group or individuals. She is keenly aware West Haven needs a solid performance-based economic plan.

To do that, Paige will start from day one by hiring a new slate of economic/financial advisors and developers. Additionally, she looks forward to hiring dedicated grant writers to secure city funding, while collaborating with current city employees and elected officials. Running a successful business has taught her the importance of properly managing people. Her passion is as patently obvious as it is infectious. She understands the importance of a well-managed police and fire department and is ready to partner with our firefighters and law enforcement officers.

As a State Representative, I have worked with community leaders from many different towns, and I can tell you that Paige Weinstein has what it takes to bring stability, accountability, and transparency to West Haven. I stand in strong support for Paige's candidacy, and I urge all voters of West Haven to vote for Paige in the Republican primary in September and then, the general election in November.

West Haven needs change and Paige Weinstein is that change. Our town is where it is today because of the electoral decisions we have made to this point; it is high time we went in a different direction. Elect Paige Weinstein and we all win.

Charles Ferraro

Chairman sends thanks for meeting

On July 25, a special meeting to endorse candidates to run for citywide offices and positions was held at the West Haven High School auditorium.

After being through many of these events throughout the years of being involved and as an elected official, I would like to thank those who made that night such a pleasure and a success.

A volunteer committee was set up to create an ambiance fitting for endorsements.

I am proud to say, after months of hearing from various mayoral and citywide candidates, and hearing their platforms and plans if elected, the West Haven Republican Town Committee selected the following ENDORSED slate:

Paige Weinstein, Mayor; Joseph Viola, City Clerk; Patricia Bollettieri, treasurer; Justin Pratt, Tax Collector; Robert Guthrie, Patricia Libero, and Rob Sangiovanni, Board of Ed; Lori Jensen and Dave Riccio, Jr., Board of Assessment; Silvana Apicella and Mei Garthwaite, Council-at-Large; Ryan Ford, First District Council; Bonnie Posick, Second District Council; Nyrell Moore, Third District Council; Dominic Broccoli, Fourth District Council; Robert Wittkofske, Fifth District Council; Dominic Koneski, Sixth District Council; Dave Riccio, Sr., Eighth District Council; Jeff Christman, Ninth District Council; and Steve Johnstone, 10th District Council.

Club publicists get deadline reminder

The fall brings an uptick of local events. The West Haven Voice would like to remind publicists of club and sports news of the requirements for weekly reports.

All leagues are to have one publicist through whom all stories come. Our rule is: we will edit it, headline it and print it, but we will not write it.

Same is true of copy coming from local civic and fraternal organizations, sending in a flyer does not mean we will publish it. Sentence and paragraph form is required.

Deadline for club news and other such events is Monday prior to the date of publication at 4 pm., unless prior notification was given to the office and cleared with the editor.

Deadline for sports copy is Tuesday at 10 a.m. unless prior clearance is given by the editor for a later submission.

All copy must be in paragraph form and is subject to the same editing for clarity, grammar and space as are all other submissions.

Pictures are welcome and will be published on an "as need" basis.

Pictures should be accompanied by the names of the people or players involved, the action in the photo (from left to right if a club shot), and the score of the game or name of the event being pictured.

For information on submissions, please call the Voice office, (203) 934-6397 during regular business hours.

Hidden Gems

A cooperative of the West Haven Voice and Economic Development Commission

As many Westies are aware, Zarnoski Power Equipment, located at 301 Savin Ave, is a repair shop that services lawn mowers, snowblowers, and other power tools and sells used equipment. What you may not know, however, is that Marco Zanetti and his brother, Julio, took over the business last year when longtime owner David Zarnoski - son of a former West Haven mayor - retired. To learn what the new owners are contributing to our community, read on!

Market demand for used lawn care tools is "exploding," according to Juliiio. This is for three reasons.

First, most residential homeowners are extremely cost conscious these days, as the price of new equipment continues to rise.

Second, they care about protecting the value of their homes, which can be much improved by regular maintenance.

Third, those who own, operate, and manage commercial equipment and lawnmower fleets are aware that regular servicing is likely to extend the life of every engine.

Echo, Kawasaki, Toro, and Buck are a few of the well-established brands you will find on display on the shop floor. A top seller by far, Julio says, is "Husquvarna, because it's got a strong motor that will last a long time." This makes it a great choice for those who want their jobs to look professional. As trends go, self-propelled mowers are popular, especially for older homeowners.

Old school business practices such as accepting trades keep customers loyal. In addition, if someone's mower dies while they're getting ready for a party, for example, the company will loan one out so they can finish on time. When a customer ages out of being able to take care of their own yard, or is temporarily disabled, Zarnowski will make trusted referrals.

The business wants more people to understand that seasonal maintenance is important and can take many forms.

In the fall, it is recommended to empty the tank of gas, particularly when it's an ethanol blend. "Otherwise," Julio says, "crystals can form in the carburetor."

An alternative is to use the non-ethanol gas sold in the shop.

Spring tune-ups cost around $75-100, depending on parts required.

They will make your machine last longer, and be much less likely to break down unexpectedly.

Be sure to store your equipment in a dry shed or basement, or, if that's not possible, use one of the plastic coverings made for that purpose.

The brothers plan to paint the building soon to give it a fresh appearance and make it more visible from the street. Historical artifacts occupying a corner of the interior show how it has changed through the years. Once, 301 Savin Avenue was where West Farms residents would bring their horse-drawn carriages for repair. Then, later, the business began repairing automobiles. Lawn mower equipment and yard tools got introduced when they became motorized. Today, Zarnowski as a business "wants to make sure everybody gets their lawn cut," keeping the West Haven community tidy and content.

School Bus Safety Tips to Help Save Your Child's Life

According to the NHTSA, riding in a school bus is the safest way for your child to travel to and from school. However, the "danger zone" when approaching or leaving the bus poses the greatest risk for children. They should be especially careful in the area's in front, or on either side of the bus.

Children should also respect the bus driver and follow the rules while riding the bus and stay quietly seated on the ride to school. Here are a few school bus safety tips you can teach your child if he or she will be riding the bus to school this year:

School Bus Safety Rules

1. Do not get on the bus until the driver says it is safe to do so.
2. Ask the driver for help if you drop something while getting on or off the bus.
3. Once on the school bus, go directly to your seat and sit down, facing the front of the bus.
4. When exiting the bus, look around for cars before walking away or crossing the street.
5. Do not wait at the bus stop alone.
6. Use the handrails when getting on and off the bus.
7. If you miss the bus, don't run after it!

Smartphones: Anxiety may overwhelm teen

children and teens opt to spend more time online and less time engaging in face-to-face interactions, their budding social skills suffer. There's even a name—"phubbing"—to describe the act of ignoring the person one is with to look at one's smartphone.

Social media apps fuel body image issues and disordered eating—particularly among girls. Social media portrays an idealized version of life that most people cannot live up to (often including the influencers putting their too perfect to be real lives on display). Apps like Instagram feature filters that change the appearance of influencers and lead young people to have an unrealistic perception of what normal bodies look like. This can fuel disordered eating and body dissatisfaction. A systematic review of 20 studies showed that social media use was associated with disordered eating and body image concerns.

For young males, eating disorders can be harder to detect because they might involve getting too thin, but it's frequently about achieving a "perfect sculpted body." The Child Mind Institute calls this manifestation "reverse anorexia" or "bigorexia."

Smartphones have become the primary tools for purchasing substances...Those searching for or even glancing at drug-related content show up in recommended follows to the pushers, thanks to the algorithm, and the pushers send chats in response. It's not what they asked for, but that's how social media takes advantage of users—one's curiosity can gain unintended momentum. From there, children can purchase drugs at the push of a button. It works like this: The drug dealer and prospective client exchange messages on platforms like WhatsApp or Snapchat. The buyer "orders" their preferred substances and the dealer instructs the buyer to make a food order through a delivery app such as Door Dash. Their food delivery arrives along with the buyer's drug of choice.

...And for viewing pornography. They often initially discover it accidentally—often at a far younger age than most parents would hope—and then become frequent viewers. (Some studies show teens to be the most significant consumers of online porn in America.)

This news may sound grim, but don't despair, says Magee. Parents can work with their child to find a happy medium surrounding their smartphone and social media use. Read on for some advice on helping your children keep their texting, chatting, and scrolling in check.

Delay getting your child their first phone as long as possible. There is no "right" age recommendation for giving a child their first smartphone. Only you know your child's maturity level, what they can handle, and what's right for them.

Work with your children to set reasonable limits on phone use. Have an open and honest conversation with your child to figure out how much access they can have to their smartphones. Also establish times the whole family will "unplug" to enjoy time together, for example at mealtimes or during a weekly "family night."

Keep the phone away from the bed. Instead of preaching and pressuring your child to "get off the phone and go to sleep," engage them in a conversation about the importance of sleep and its benefits. Help them recognize that smartphone use is an obstacle to a good night's rest, and that bed is not for homework or social time, but for sleeping.

Silence nonessential notifications. No one can focus near a smartphone that's constantly beeping or vibrating. Remind your children to silence the notifications on their social media apps so incoming messages are less distracting while they are doing other activities.

Set a good example by checking your own smartphone use. One study reveals that four in 10 children worry their parents are addicted to their devices. If this sounds like you, it's time to make some changes around your own phone use. Remember, your children are watching and learning from you.

Help your child embrace their life in the "real world." When your child's life is full of healthy activities and strong relationships, they will be less tempted to escape into their social media apps.

"With the right support, your children can build a healthy relationship with their smartphones and social media feeds," concludes Magee. "After all, there are benefits to being able to connect with friends and family and having access to a world of information. Keep the conversation going around responsible use of their devices as they grow. Soon they will be making their own smart decisions that you can be proud of."

PARTY ENDORSED CHARLIE APPROVED

We have been neglected by our elected, and although we aren't the best at recycling waste, we are the best at recycling the same old candidates. It's time to bring a Fresh Start to City Hall, opening West Haven for business and expanding city services to satisfy the needs of our diverse and hardworking community.
